Just Released: "Atlas of Shrinking Cities" and "Shrinking Cities - Complete Works 2"

After more than four years of research work, the last two publications of the project "Schrumpfende Städte / Shrinking Cities" have now been released. The "Atlas of Shrinking Cities" describes and analyzes the phenomenon of urban shrinking on the basis of numerous maps, diagrams, and city portraits from a worldwide perspective; the digital publication "Complete Works 2 / Interventions" supplements the print publications primarily with more than 6 hours of film on innovative models for action, as well as 2,000 digital pages of study material.

Atlas der schrumpfenden Städte / Atlas of Shrinking Cities

Ed. Philipp Oswalt and Tim Rieniets. With editorial assistance from Elke Beyer, Anke Hagemann, Kristina Herresthal, and Henning Schirmel, 160 pages, 26.7 x 37.5 cm, with numerous colored maps, German/English
Hatje Cantz Verlag, Ostfildern, Summer 2006
ISBN 3-7757-1714-5, 39.80 Euro

Which cities are shrinking? Where are these cities located? What processes underlie this shrinking? The Atlas of Shrinking Cities documents this global phenomenon with about 30 world maps, 50 diagrams, 40 city portraits, 15 lexical essays, and a register of cities, thus making the process visually comprehensive with an innovative graphic realization.

Four chapters use statistics, maps, and illustrations to explore the background of urban shrinking, which ranges from demographic developments and currents of migration through dwindling resources and the destruction of nature to changes in patterns of settlement. Case studies of shrinking cities from every continent present the concrete effects of global processes of transformation. The register shows the population development of all cities larger than 100,000 inhabitants that have shrunk in the last fifty years.
